Immigrant Integration after Multiculturalism

This lecture takes the recent death-sayings of “multiculturalism“by some West European state leaders as hub for a reflection where immigrant integration is moving after multiculturalism. The main issues of cultural integration (language and religion) are laid out with their implications for policy, with special emphasis on Europe. Ways ahead for a more effective and just management of cultural diversity in the future are proposed.

Wednesday, 4 July at 5 p.m.
Monument Building Gellner Room
Budapest, 1051 Nádor utca 9.
