How Indonesia Became a Constitutional Democracy and What It Means for Constitutional Processes and Democratic Institutions

by

Donald L. Horowitz

James B. Duke Professor of Law and Political Science, Duke University, Fellow at the American Academy, Berlin

Chair: Carsten Q. Schneider
Department of Political Science and DISC, CEU

TIME: Friday, 10 May 2013, 16:00 – 17:30 hrs Popper Room, CEU
followed by a reception

Donald L. Horowitz is a James B. Duke Professor of Law and Political Science at Duke University. In 2009, he was presented with the Distinguished Scholar Award of the Ethnicity, Nationalism, and Migration Section of the International Studies Association. Elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1993, he served as President of the American Society for Political and Legal Philosophy from 2007 to 2010. He is the author of seven books among which: “The Courts and Social Policy” (1977), which won the Louis Brownlow Award of the National Academy of Public Administration; “Ethnic Groups in Conflict” (1985, 2000); “A Democratic South Africa? Constitutional Engineering in a Divided Society” (1991), which won the Ralph Bunche Prize of the American Political Science Association; and the most recent one “Constitutional Change and Democracy in Indonesia”, published in 2012 by Cambridge University Press.