HOW BAD IS CORRUPTION IN HIGHER EDUCATION?
DOES INTEGRITY HAVE A CHANCE?

presented by the

Leadership and Management for Integrity
SUN course

Date and time: 18:00 – 20:00, Thursday, July 4, 2013
Location: Auditorium, CEU

PANELISTS:
Fredrik Galtung is the Chief Executive and Founder (with Jeremy Pope) of Integrity Action. He has consulted on strategic corruption control for the last 20 years with governments, companies, donor agencies, and international organisations in over 20 countries. He is considered one of the foremost experts on metrics related to corruption, fraud and organisational integrity. Fredrik began his international career as the founding staff member and Head of Research of Transparency International (TI), the world’s first global anti-corruption NGO, and was responsible for developing the Bribe Payers Index (BPI) and the Global Corruption Barometer (with Gallup International).

Anne Lonsdale CBE is Chair of CARA (Council for Assisting Refugee Academics) and worked as Provost of Nazarbayev University, Astana, Kazakhstan, which admitted its first students in 2010, opening three undergraduate Schools in 2011. She was a Pro-Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge University from 1998 to 2003, and President of New Hall to 2008. From 1993-6, she was Secretary-General of the Central European University based in Budapest, Prague and Warsaw. She was awarded the CBE for services to Higher Education in 2004.

Muriel Poisson has worked at the International Institute for Educational Planning since 1996, and is the Task Manager of the project on Ethics and Corruption in Education. Prior to this, she was involved in the preparation of studies on non-formal education in Asia. She participated in the organization of meetings on curriculum change for the International Bureau of Education (IBE) in Geneva, and was also involved in activities led by UNESCO within the framework of the Dakar follow-up. Muriel has authored a number of articles and books published by the IIEP.

Antoinette Kankindi is the Director of the Strathmore University Governance Centre in Kenya. Dr Kankindi holds a PhD and MCGO (Governance) from the University of Navarra, Spain and LLM from the University of Kinshasa, DRC. She joined Strathmore University in 2004 where she lectures in Social and Political Philosophy. She was appointed Director of the Governance Centre in May 2009. Before pursuing her postgraduate studies in Philosophy (Rome and Pamplona), she worked as legal advisor for Chevron Overseas Co. and the Chilean Embassy.

SUMMARY:
Corruption in Higher Education rarely makes the newspaper headlines except when a senior political figure gets caught having plagiarized a doctoral dissertation. This panel will explore how corruption is affecting higher education in some key emerging regions of the world. We hypothesise that corruption in the education system has far-reaching implications for all societies, and we believe it needs to be addressed with some urgency.
