Equality and Social Justice Research Group

and the Center for Policy Studies

invite you to the workshop

Women’s Movements and Policy Change:
Domestic Violence Policy Processes in Central and Eastern Europe

October 18, 2013
Gellner Room

9.30-11.00  Chair: Elissa Helms, Department of Gender Studies

Comparing Women’s Movement Influence on Domestic Violence Policy: A model of critical institutionalization
Andrea Krizsan, Center for Policy Studies
Raluca Popa, Department of Gender Studies, Council of Europe

A decade long quest for legislative reform: Gendered structures, women’s movements and domestic violence policy change in Romania, 2000-2012
Raluca Popa, Department of Gender Studies, Council of Europe

The Polish women’s movements’ efforts to change the state policies on domestic violence between 2001-2012
Dominika Gruziel, PhD, Department of Gender Studies

Comments
Dorit Geva, Department of Sociology and Social Anthropology

11.00-11.30    Coffee break

11.30-13.00  Chair : Andrea Krizsan, Center for Policy Studies

The spirit of the law: mobilizing and/or professionalizing the women’s movement in post-socialist Bulgaria
Mariya Ivancheva, PhD, Department of Sociology and Social Anthropology

Feminist generations in women’s movement activity on domestic violence policy change in Croatia
Sanja Kajinic, Department of Gender Studies

Coming back to the model
Andrea Krizsan, Center for Policy Studies
Raluca Popa, Department of Gender Studies, Council of Europe

Comments
Austin Choi-Fitzpatrick, School of Public Policy