PROGRAMS

MA in International Relations · 1 year
This program gives a strong foundation in international affairs with an interdisciplinary curriculum. Students can choose between two tracks. The “New York City” track (offered jointly with Bard College), provides foundations in International Relations in Vienna in the fall term, while winter and spring terms are spent in New York City, including a mandatory internship and a capstone project.

The “Vienna” track offers a compact curriculum combining International Relations foundations with three different specializations: Conflict and Security, Global Order and Politics, and International Political Economy and Development.

MA in International Relations · 2 years
This program is designed for candidates who wish to deepen their thinking about international relations, combining theoretical and methodological academic training with area expertise in three tracks: Conflict and Security, Global Order and Politics and International Political Economy and Development. Students can enroll in optional modules dedicated to professional development and have a large range of mobility opportunities through the Erasmus, CIVICA and OSUN networks.
